Keynote Title: “Resilience in Development: The Importance of Early Childhood”

Abstract: Early childhood period is an important time to nurture the development of resilience. Resilience is when children show healthy development in spite of adversity. Some difficult circumstances, like; the death of a parent, living in poverty, stressful family or being in a natural disaster, can affect child’s development. If a child’s resilient, can successfully deal with these difficulties. So, resilience is being able to adapt to difficult circumstances in a positive way. Resilience in development and its importance of early childhood will be discussed in this congress.
